

Educators working together for students, schools, communities

3 Facts about MSEA

1

One of every 83 Marylanders is an MSEA member.

2

MSEA is the largest union of public employees in the state.

3

8,500 MSEA members rallied for school funding in March 2019, the largest rally in Annapolis in nearly a decade.

Educators are committed to the success of every student. To reach that goal, they need reasonable class sizes and workloads, high quality resources and professional development, a modern and safe working environment, fair and sensible evaluation and testing policies, and improved salaries and benefits. Your union—your local, state, and national education associations—are democratic organizations of school employees that fight to achieve these common goals so you and your students can be successful.

Common education interests, common education goals

These groups of educators—74,000 members in Maryland and 3 million across the country—lead on issues that affect public education, our professions, and our students.

We believe that no matter where a child lives in Maryland, the promise of a quality public school education is theirs. We use our strong, united voice to fight for equitable funding and the resources students need for success, for class sizes that make meaningful one-on-one interaction possible, and for professional pay, autonomy, and respect for all educators. We advocate for high quality professional development that is rich, deep, and targeted to the needs of educators and the diversity of their students. And we're committed to supporting educators at every stage in their career—from their very first years through a secure retirement.

Educators taking back the power on education policies

We know that what happens in the classroom is directly related to the public policies that come from federal, state, and local leaders. In our democracy, every voice matters, but history has proven that organized voices—louder and more powerful voices—are the ones lawmakers respond to. MSEA and your local association make sure your voice is heard and respected by education policymakers. MSEA members lead on education issues where decisions are made in your county, Annapolis, and Washington, D.C.

MSEA has been a vocal advocate for ending Maryland's $2.9 billion annual education funding shortage and delivering the resources and educator-informed policies that schools need. Following an outpouring of educator activism, in April 2019 the General Assembly passed the Blueprint for Maryland's Future, adding $1.1 billion in new funding over the next three years to increase staffing levels, expand pre-k and community schools, and raise educator pay.

In 2020, the General Assembly is expected to revise the state school funding formula to comprehensively address the funding shortage—and MSEA will remain at the forefront of the fight to ensure that every school and student in every zip code gets the funding they deserve for years to come.

Without MSEA, you're on your own. As a member, you know that 74,000 members and MSEA have your back. Learn more about MSEA and how you can support your profession—visit marylandeducators.org, or ask your school representative.

MSEA's 74,000—and NEA's 3 million—members carry powerful influence and buying power that supports exclusive member benefits. Leadership training and professional development, professional advocacy and organizing on education policy, legal protection and representation, and collective bargaining protect and enhance your career. Discounts at local businesses and national chains, exclusive access to top-rated financial programs, discounted home and car insurance, and members-only savings programs for college, retirement, and more provide opportunities and financial flexibility for your family.
